Wow. Matt, the 12 day advantage here is great and a potential huge benefit. Your patent application is prior art to Mr. Trojanksy's patent application and there is nothing they will be able to do about it. They will need to somehow get around your patent application.

I will take a look at his prosecution history. The application probably hasn't been examined yet, as yours has been since you filed the Track One application. If they filed this in the regular manner your patent will be granted before they get a first examination report.

I will confirm all this and let you know and let you know what options you may have in addition to doing nothing and letting the patent office take care of it by citing your application/patent.

Best regards,

Amanda
