Amanda,

Good morning

Here is my latest - https://www.dropbox.com/s/49w0h7yxv0cn3wj/Matthew_Guertin_v3_partial.pdf?dl=1

This will most likely be the final version for now.

Even though I don't have every single thing in regards to information of the systems and whatnot I think I have more than enough - feel free to let me know if you need any other info or have any questions though obviously. I am becoming really bored staring at these pages and want to move onto finishing up the fabrication model which I find much more enjoyable

A few things I wanted to mention in regards to the overall claims of my invention -

- Even though I keep focusing on this particular version which is small and involves a single person if I am able to patent the technology as a whole like you had mentioned I am also envisioning a larger version which would be big enough for a few people to walk on a large belt on a much larger turntable
- Another spinoff of this idea that I think would have a market is for a large turntable without any treadmill belt. Perhaps it is 6' or 8' in diameter and it has a very large slip ring as part of the design which would allow a DJ act or other musician to have power and other audio/video/data connections available to plug into on this large turntable. This would enable DJ's for instance to play a live set where they could be rotated which would make it appear the camera is orbiting around behind them and is able to look at the crowd.

That is all. I only mention these things in case they are something that is also able to be included as part of this filing / claim

I'm about to get a few hours of sleep now but I will be available again this afternoon if you need anything from me or have any questions.

I'll set an alarm for 3pm to check email/ phone to see if you need anything from me (I always default to creating cool stuff at night whenever possible so now it is my bedtime)

Chat soon,
Thanks!

~Matt
